Learning Objectives

- # Enable students to build confidence and fundamental practical skills in food.
- # Gain experience and knowledge in preparing traditional bengali dishes and understanding the food ingredients
- # Describe Bengali food culture. The culinary culture of pre-colonial Bengal contained many features distinguishing it from other parts of the country. Conventionally, Bengali dishes are divided into four types, such as charbya (food which is to be chewed, like rice, fish, etc.), choṣhya (food which is to be sucked, liquids like ambal, tak etc.) lehya (food which is to be licked, like chatni) and peya (drinks, like milk)

Learning Outcomes

- # prepare a variety of food products and dishes
- # It will ultimately enhance the employability of the students.
- # To be able to conduct healthy food preparation, including seasonal recipe development, preservation, food safety and handling
